

Trey Johnson & Jason Wilmon

Trey Johnson is a force of blues, roots, and Americana. With one foot in the air and one foot stomping out the rhythm of the Heartland, and his two hands holding on to the guitar for dear life, his unmistakable sound and talent energize audiences throughout the South.

Having been influenced by artists such as Keb' Mo, Amos Lee, Todd Snider and Walter Matthau, Trey's blend of music is as eclectic as you might imagine. His groove can take you everywhere from the back pew on Sunday morning, to dancing all the way down to the altar on Revival night.

As diverse as Trey's music is, it's no wonder that he's found several avenues for expressing his art. Trey can be found entertaining audiences solo, or with his buddy and bottle rocket of a blues harp man, Jason Willmon. Either show is a can't-miss, and Trey is guaranteed to leave his audiences grinning like foxes digging yellowjackets.
